your diversity source • the largest multicultural children's book publisher in the United States

Lee & Low Books is the largest multicultural children's book publisher in the United States. We are your diversity source.

In 1991, Lee & Low Books began with a simple mission: to publish beautiful children's books about everyone, for everyone. We wanted our books to emphasize the richness of today's cultures, to reflect our world as it truly looks, and to be authentic and accurate. Our books have since won major awards including the Coretta Scott King Award, the Pura Belpré Award, the NAACP Image Award, and many more.

We are family-owned and independent, which means we make our own decisions, take risks on stories we love, and keep our books in print. We are also one of the few publishing companies in the United States owned by people of color. We are dedicated to promoting equity both within our company and in the publishing industry at large.

Lee & Low Books publishes books for a wide range of young readers, including dual-language guided reading books under our Bebop Books imprint; picture books under our Lee & Low Books and Shen's Books imprints; and middle-grade and young adult novels under the Tu Books imprint. We are also one of the nation's largest publishers of bilingual and Spanish-language children's titles through our beloved Children's Book Press imprint and Más Piñata line.

We are proud to work with schools and districts across the country to help them build libraries and collections that reflect their students. We are committed to meeting the needs of educators not only through our books, but also by offering free, in-depth teacher's guides for nearly all of our titles.

Bookstores and libraries can order our books directly or from all major distributors including Ingram, Follett, Baker & Taylor, and Mackin.

Visit our website, leeandlow.com, to learn more about our company and browse our books, collections, and resources. We look forward to meeting you!

Testimonials

“Lee & Low Books are publishers and heroes. . . . Their stories are authentic, respectful, and unforgettable. They harness the power and wonder of our culturally rich world to create books that will entertain and inspire both children and adults.”

—Kyle Zimmer, President/Cofounder, First Book

“Lee & Low has always been a trusted source for high-quality, authentic multicultural literature for children. Their commitment to diversity is genuine, and so is their commitment to finding new authors and illustrators to tell the stories of our diverse nation. This one small publisher has had an enormous impact on the available body of contemporary multicultural children’s books.”

—Kathleen T. Horning, Director, Cooperative Children’s Book Center, School of Education, University of Wisconsin-Madison

“Thank you, thank you, Lee & Low, for providing quality ‘mirror’ experiences for children as well as new ‘windows’ for readers. It is always with great confidence [that] I refer individuals inquiring about great books for children to Lee & Low. I know they will be pleased with the choices available and the quality—physical quality as well as quality substance.”

—Carol H. Rasco, Former President and CEO, Reading Is Fundamental (RIF)

“Lee & Low has been a leader in publishing books for diverse readers for many years. Their collections are outstanding and should be part of every school’s curriculum. If we want our kids to become independent readers, we have to make sure that they are exposed to a broad cross-section of literature. Lee & Low’s books educate and inspire. Their books are an invaluable resource.”

—Dr. Pedro Noguera, coauthor of Excellence Through Equity and Distinguished Professor of Education, UCLA

“Lee & Low represents the very best in children’s publishing and is an important leader in the movement for more diversity in children’s literature.”

—Ellen Oh, CEO & President, We Need Diverse Books (WNDB)

“Lee & Low plays a unique and valuable role in the publishing industry. Not only are they publishing new books, but they are also bringing back into print many of the gems from multicultural literature that have been unavailable for years. These titles were published at a time when children’s books had a stronger orientation to issues of race, class, and power than one typically sees in picture books today. Lee & Low is also conducting invaluable studies of diversity (or the lack of it) in the children’s book publishing industry. The studies serve as important exposés and a call to action.”

—Deborah Menkart, Executive Director, Teaching for Change

“Lee & Low Books is simply the best when it comes to publishing and promoting diversity in children’s literature. They are one of my top resources for excellent books, booklists, guides, and resources to recommend to educators and parents. And as passionate advocates for diversity in children’s literature and other fields, Lee & Low are models for the rest of us. They pave the way for new authors and illustrators covering all forms of diversity and they remind us to be vigilant in our own reading lives, not only for ourselves and our children, but for society at large.”

—Anita Merina (retired), NEA’s Read Across America

“Lee & Low publishes high-quality books that feature all kinds of people and families, offering children the chance to see themselves in the pages even as they encounter others who are different. A school whose classroom libraries are stocked with Lee & Low books has made a commitment to celebrate diversity.”

—Maureen Costello, Director, Teaching Tolerance

“We look for children’s and young adult literature that engages with the shared heritage of the Americas in authentic and meaningful ways. Lee & Low Books has become a mainstay for us in this somewhat formidable task. Their powerful stories resonate, always guaranteeing worthwhile perspectives. We are proud to use their resources.”

—Keira Philipp-Schnurer, Supervisor of Community Education Programs, the Latin American and Iberian Institute, University of New Mexico
